Grover's order for the removal settlers on Indian reservations leads to the public inquiry, must citizens suffer to please the whim of an executive? These squatters took their claims with the approval of President Arthur and great injustice is done them by the fact that President Cleveland's notions differ from those of his predecessor. The great I AM ought to be haltered or the ceses of damaged settlers made good.

Allen G. Thurman has been frequently mentioned as a candidate for Governor and more recently his admirers have coveted the Presidency for him. One of these nominations is about as nearly attainable to him as the other. His gubernatorial aspirations would be nipped in the bud by the rampant kid element of the Ohio Democracy, and modern political methods are too free and frisky to be successfully worked by the Old Roman.

Since the attack on the Paulding ervoir has called attention to Ohio canals there has been a great outcry gainst them. The fact that they don't pay has been held up as an evidence that no benefit is derived from them. But without our inland waterways many branches of business and many remotely cated towns would be in a sorry plight. If the canals of the State were less ridiculed and more patronized they would be less drain upon the State treasury.

> Gen. John Beatty's review of Ohio's record during the war in a recent speech at Cincinnati contained some criticisms on the Century Magazine's war articles that cut like a Toledo blade. It is truly amusing to behold the catalogue of excuses some Confederate generals put forth to show why the other side whipped. If any inquiring mind is desirous to know how battles were not fought he can obtain information by reading the Century articles.

Henry George is doing Ireland all the harm he can by seizing upon the Irish situation as an example to prove his crazy land theories. He says rents are as injust in the United States as in Ireland, and that rents are an unmitigated wrong and should be abolished. On reading his emphatic and oft-repeated declarations that "the land belongs to was not expected to live. They arrived here the laborer." one is tempted to ask if the Almighty is supposed to have any sort of remote proprietary interest in this terrestrial ball?

It is currently reported that the Civil Service Commission intends subjecting all officers employed in the departments before the passage of the law to an examination according to the modern system. The declaration is absurd. The law is plainly ex post facto, and great injustice would be done to a class of men whom experience has made valuable to the nation. The Civil Service Commission is a responsible body, doing a good work, but if it assumes too much authority, Congress may shorten its tether rope.

In Memoriam.

Carmel neighborhood is called to mourn the loss of one of its best and most honored citizens. On Friday, May 6th, 1887, William McCoppin left his earthly home for heaven. He was suddenly stricken with brain and heart trouble. His sufferings were severs, but of short duration. He was buried at Carmel, Ohio, on Sabbath, May 8th. His funeral was preached from the 23d chapter of Numbers, and 10th verse. It was an excellent discourse addressed to the living by Rev. Frank Gilliland. iev. C. J. Wells and the writer, his pastor, spoke appreciatively of his life and good works. The large attendance at the funeral spoke his worth as a neighbor, a Christian, and a citizen. About five hundred were present. William Harrison McCoppin was born in Virginia March 16th, 1817, and died on the 6th day of May, 1887, aged 70 years, I month and 21 days. He was married to Mary Ellen Head Nov. 26th, 1844. Eight children were born to them, four of whom preceded him to glory. Brother McCoppin was a man of strong mind, of unimpeachable integrity, and of lofty aims. He was religious everywhere. The Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was a member, had a strong supporter in him. The loss to the friends, the church and the community can not be estimated. His life is worthy of imitation by all. His widow, bereft children, and near friends have the sympathy of all, and the earnest prayers of the church. May God support them and help us all to prepare to meet him where "all is bright."
